

THE LITTLE BOOK OF

The Celestial Herbalist
CRYSTAL CONJURE MAGIC

The same sprig goes into the bride's bouquet and onto the coffin. Rosemary is carried at weddings and cast into graves — woven into the happiest day and the saddest — and it is no contradiction, for both are acts of remembrance, and remembrance is what rosemary is for. "There's rosemary, that's for remembrance," says Ophelia, saying aloud what the herb had meant for two thousand years before her: this is the plant that does not forget, and will not let you.

The Romans named it ros marinus, the dew of the sea, for the way it grows on dry cliffs above the surf. Greek scholars wound it through their hair while they studied, trusting it to hold their reading fast in the mind. That same faithfulness turns toward love — sworn into marriages as a living pledge, planted by the door to keep a household whole — and toward protection: rosemary was strewn and smouldered against the plague, the backbone of the legendary Four Thieves' Vinegar, and distilled into Hungary Water, said to restore an aged queen's youth.

Memory, love, protection, healing — four powers from one green needle. Most people know rosemary only from the kitchen. This little book gives you one working for each, so you can see what it truly is.

Everything here is for external charm-craft only — these herbs are dressed, carried, and placed, never eaten or brewed as tea. Do the ritual, then meet it halfway in the ordinary world.

♦ 1 · Rosemary for Memory — The Anchored Stone

Mercury-Aligned Rosemary · a Crystal working · the technique:
"Crystal Over Written Intention"

Why this working. This is rosemary's oldest and truest office — the scholar's herb that holds a thing fast in the mind. Mercury, ruler of thought and speech, sharpens that gift to a fine point: memory, clear recall, and a mind that keeps what matters. The old craft anchors an intention by resting a stone upon it, pinning the thought in place. That is what we do here — with rosemary to sharpen and a stone to hold.

You will need

- Mercury Aligned Rosemary — the hero, to sharpen and fix the memory
- Mercury Aligned Bay Leaf — for clear thought and success in study
- Mercury Aligned Lemongrass — to sweep the mental clutter aside
- Peridot — the keystone, for a light, clear, quick-working mind
- Herb Salt — the salt of the wise, leaned toward memory
- A slip of paper and a pen

The working. This is Crystal Over Written Intention — you anchor your focus by resting a stone on a written word. Write your petition on the slip — one line, present tense: My memory is sharp and holds what I need. Sprinkle a little Herb Salt across the paper and scatter the Rosemary, Bay Leaf, and Lemongrass over it, naming each as you go. Set the Peridot on top of the folded paper to pin the intention down.

The charged moment. Take a pinch of the rosemary and crush it between your fingers until its bright, sharp, sea-cliff scent lifts — the scent the Greek scholars trusted. Breathe it in. As you hold it, see the thing you need to remember settling into your mind and staying there, clear and fixed. Then speak your line aloud: My memory is sharp and holds what I need.

Keep it. Leave the stone on the paper on your desk while you study or prepare. Refresh the herbs when their scent fades. Carry the Peridot in your pocket on the day you must recall.

Then meet it halfway. The stone anchors the mind you bring — it doesn't do the reading. Study, and let rosemary hold fast what you learn.

♦ 2 · Rosemary for Love — The Faithful Flame

Venus-Aligned Rosemary · a Candle working · the technique: "Candle & a Simple Gesture"

Why this working. Rosemary is sworn into marriages as a pledge of faithful love, and it dispels the jealousy that poisons a bond. Under Venus it deepens into loyal, clear-eyed devotion — not the first flush but the love that remembers its vows. This working keeps that flame tended by a small daily gesture, so the intention stays alive between lightings.

You will need

- Venus Aligned Rosemary — the hero, for faithful, jealousy-free love
- Venus Aligned Mistletoe — to lead a true, devoted love to your door
- Venus Aligned Spanish Moss — for soothed, tender connection
- Rose Quartz — the keystone of gentle, unconditional love
- Vanilla Salt — sweet salt, for tenderness and comfort
- A pink or red candle, a holder, matches, and a little oil

The working. This is a Candle & a Simple Gesture — a flame you tend with one small act each day. Dress the candle with a little oil, base to wick, and roll it in the Rosemary, Mistletoe, and Spanish Moss. Ring its base with a little Vanilla Salt and set the Rose Quartz at its foot.

Hold the dressed candle to your heart, breathe its warmed scent, and name your love true and faithful. Light it.

The gesture. Each day, when you pass the candle, pause — touch your heart, and silently reaffirm the bond you are tending. That small gesture is the working kept alive. Relight the candle when you can; snuff it, never blow it.

Then meet it halfway. The flame tends the love — you still show up for it. Say the kind thing, keep the small promise. The working warms; you do the loving.

♦ 3 · Rosemary for Protection — The Warded Bundle

Mars-Aligned Rosemary · a Symbol & Talisman working · the technique: "Small Wrap or Cloth"

Why this working. Rosemary was the plague-herb — burned in the sickroom, sewn into the grave-robber's vinegar, strewn across the threshold to keep harm outside. Under Mars, the warrior's planet, that facet sharpens from a gentle guard into a raised shield. The old craft holds a protection bound inside a wrapped cloth, so the ward stays sealed and works on its own.

You will need

- Mars Aligned Rosemary — the hero, raising the shield
- Mars Aligned Cilantro — to ward off an incoming attack
- Pluto Aligned Ginger — for fierce, driving force
- Black Tourmaline — the guardian stone, turning harm away
- Rock Salt — plain, strong salt for a firm boundary
- A small square of dark cloth and a cord

The working. This is a Small Wrap or Cloth — you bind and contain the protection inside a folded cloth. Lay the cloth out. In its center place a pinch of Rock Salt for the boundary, then the Rosemary, Cilantro, and Ginger, naming each as the shield, the ward, the driving force. Set the Black Tourmaline in the middle as the guardian.

The charged moment. Take a pinch of the rosemary and crush it until its sharp, resinous scent lifts — the scent burned against the plague. Breathe it in, and see a clean hard edge close around you and yours, a boundary harm cannot cross. Speak it: I am guarded, and what means harm cannot reach me.

Bind it. Gather the corners and tie the bundle shut with the cord. That binding is the working — sealed, it holds the ward without tending. Carry it, or set it by the door it guards. Leave it bound.

Then meet it halfway. The ward raises the shield — you still lock the real door and trust your gut. The working guards; you stay wise.

♦ 4 · Rosemary for Healing — The Restoring Bath

Sedna-Aligned Rosemary · a Water working · the technique: "Bath Steam Intention"

Why this working. Distilled into Hungary Water, rosemary was the cordial said to restore an aged queen's youth and beauty both — the bright sea-cliff herb that lifts a low spirit and wakes a tired body. Under Sedna, the far, deep power of endurance, it becomes the herb that carries you through a long healing, holding you steady across the hard middle of recovery.

You will need

- Sedna Aligned Rosemary — the hero, the restoring cordial-herb
- Saturn Aligned Oak Bark — to endure the longest trial unbroken
- Mars Aligned Comfrey — the great healing herb, to hold the line through a long mending
- Moonstone — the keystone, for gentle renewal and cyclical healing (kept dry, on the rim)
- Dead Sea Salt — the deep mineral salt, for restoration
- A warm bath, and a muslin bag if you have one

The working. This is a Bath Steam Intention — you draw the working from warm, rising steam. Run a warm bath and dissolve the Dead Sea Salt, naming it for restoration. Add the Rosemary, Oak Bark, and

Comfrey — loose, or in the muslin bag — and rest the Moonstone on the tub's edge, out of the water. Let the herbs steep a moment until their scent rises in the steam.

The charged moment. Step in. Breathe the warm, bright, resinous steam deeply — this is where the working lives, in the rising mist, not the water. As you soak, feel the tiredness and the weight of the hard passage lifting off you, carried up and away on the steam. Say it once: I am restored, and I am healing.

When it's done. Let the water drain fully, picturing it carrying the weariness away. Keep the Moonstone by your bed. Return the spent herbs to the earth.

Then meet it halfway. The bath restores the spirit — you still rest, eat, and let the body mend in its own time. The working lifts you; you let yourself heal.

◆ Choose Your Rosemary

Four powers, and this is only the beginning of them. Every one of the seventeen celestial bodies turns rosemary toward a different gift — Uranus for the lightning breakthrough, Pluto for the memory of past lives, the Moon for clear dreams, Jupiter for far sight.
